Vue d'ensemble: This house in the very heart of the Los Boliches neighborhood, was originally a nearby district that has ended up being part of Fuengirola, so it is like a town with a fishing port within a city. A distinctive feature of this area is its narrow streets and picturesque houses typical of a fishing district. It is a very lively area with many restaurants, bars and shops. However, one of its main attractions is Los Boliches beach, with its fine, dark sand, and which has also been awarded the Blue Flag and the 'Q' for Tourist Quality. The Boliches area has its own Renfe commuter train and intercity bus stop. The house is a Bi-Family house, divided into two, it has 3 bedrooms and 3 fairly large bathrooms, balconies in the living room area and main room, with a large communal terrace on the top floor of the building, ideal for a family with kids.
